Dear Sir or Madam,

I am writing to express my disapproval for the latest Microsoft antitrust settlement. It is true that this "solution" would help disadvantaged schoolchildren by furnishing them with computers and software, but I fear that Microsoft's goal, and in fact what could very well happen, is that such actions would further establish Microsoft's share in the education market, undermining competitors such as Apple who are struggling to fight the Microsoft behemoth already. Microsoft's proposed settlement is inappropriate to the current situation. I urge you to reject it for the good of the computer industry, including Microsoft's competitors.

Very sincerely,

Zach Arnold
